

Cultural Clashes in Co-Occurring Disorders and What to do About It

David Mee-Lee, M.D.

Presentation Description

It is a challenge to integrate addiction and mental health systems. The historical roots, funding traditions, differences in ideology and values have created a clash of cultures that impacts people with co-occurring disorders. This presentation will review these culture gaps and offer solutions to understand and address the differences.

Learning Objectives

Upon completion of training, participants can be expected to:

1. Identify the major ideological differences that divide addiction and mental health systems
2. Describe the negative clinical implications for people with co-occurring disorders
3. Apply unifying principals and strategies to resolve fragmentation and improve outcomes
